

PRESS RELEASEREALOGIS Berlin promotes successful “home-grown talent” Anne Angerstein and Conrad Riedel to senior consultants

Berlin, 31 May 2021 – REALOGIS – the leading property consulting company for industrial and logistics properties and business parks in Germany, with 70 experts – has appointed two internally trained employees at its Berlin office, Anne Angerstein (27) and Conrad Riedel (34), as senior consultants as at 1 May 2021. Both of these talents were supported internally as part of Realogis’ long-term personnel strategy and have been with the Group since 2017.

“Anne Angerstein and Conrad Riedel are a well-coordinated team that generates a high volume of transactions,” reports Ben Dörks, Managing Director of Realogis Immobilien Berlin GmbH, who has been on board at the Berlin branch since it was first established in 2015. “They have shown great initiative over the past few years and significantly influenced the market to make Realogis the undisputed Number 1 in the size category of up to 3,000 m² in the Berlin metropolitan region. In the future, they will further expand their expertise and market penetration in the size category of up to 5,000 m².”

Since it was founded, Realogis has evolved into the leading consulting company for industrial and logistics properties in the Berlin metropolitan region and is responsible for an annual transaction volume of up to 100,000 m² of rental space, representing up to a quarter of the total take-up generated by all market participants. In relation to take-up brokered by estate agents only, i.e. after deducting owner-occupier leases and lettings agreed without an estate agent, Realogis Berlin is involved in more than a third of all leases.*

Conrad Riedel has been working as a consultant since 2019, after completing his training as a real estate specialist at Realogis. Having previously studied the real estate industry for several years at the HTW University of Applied Sciences in Berlin, he brings good knowledge of project management, urban development and international building law to consulting for national and international customers, owners and investors. In addition, he has a strong focus on customers and solutions, not least thanks to his previous training in hotel management (2004-2007) followed by many years working in this industry in the Frankfurt region.

Anne Angerstein successfully completed her training as a real estate specialist at Realogis Berlin in early 2020. She then worked as a consultant both for the Berlin letting unit and nationwide on the investment team, supporting transactions. Prior to this, she studied and completed teacher training for German and Ethics (values and norms) in Jena, including the first state examination, and completed all practical semesters in regular schools. Her training and her experiences dealing with different target groups, i.e. people of different ages such as school pupils, parents and teachers, make her an expert in social skills, including acceptance, tolerance and diversity as well as communication skills and conflict management. Since January 2021, she has also been applying these skills in her additional role as a trainer for junior staff at Realogis in Berlin.

For years, the team at the Realogis branch in Berlin has consisted of up to eight employees, including apprentices training to be real estate specialists or office managers. "This year we will once again offer three young people the opportunity to develop their long-term career prospects with experienced colleagues and a wide range of development and training opportunities," says Ben Dörks. "On the Berlin market, very few talented specialists are available in the field of logistics properties and industrial properties. This makes it all the more important to train junior staff from scratch ourselves."

* For example, in 2020 Realogis brokered 107,000 m² of the total letting volume of 480,000 m² in the Berlin region and of the approximately 300,000 m² brokered by estate agents only.
